SETTLE BRIDGEPORT COAL STRIKE

WARNING AGAINST GROWING TENDENCY FOR SPECULATION

IS SOUNDED BY COMPTROLLER OF CURRENCY IN AN ADDRESS.

URGES BANKERS ADVISE SOUND INVESTMENTS

Important Money Be Available to Sustain Renewed Business Activity.

GAINESVILLE, FLA., April 22—A warning against a growing tendency towards speculation throughout the country as business conditions improve was sounded here today by Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger in an address before the Florida Bankers' association. He urged the bankers to advise their clients toward sound investments and to use their influence to prevent fly-by-night schemes."

Recent reductions in interstate rates Mr Crissinger declared have been too generally regarded by the speculative public as a sign of easy profits in sight when at the present time it was of supreme importance that money credit should be available to sustain renewed business activity.

The present he said is a most appropriate time for bankers to admonish their clients against over-confidence in speculative investments. The world needs a restoration of opportunity to produce and consume things needed for human progress and bankers should keep in mind that the first call for liquid capital must be made in behalf of the farmer, the manufacturer and in general the industrial and financial community. It is equally important that banks be kept from over-extending themselves by too liberal accommodations to speculative clients.

"The business outlook for the whole country is brighter and more encouraging than it has been for the past two years. We are well rid of business and industrial froth and in a position to go forward on sound and substantial lines. We are ready to start to be off to be doing. Business industry agriculture and commerce need only the awakening of American pluck courage and initiative to insure the re-establishment of prosperity.

The banks which come under my supervision in the main are in condition and prepared to finance every productive enterprise but should have nothing for speculative adventure. There has been wonderful improvement in banking and financial circles money is easy and cheap and as in the past the banks again will be the bulwark of prosperity and the sheet anchor of national progress.

DOUGLAS BUTLER DIES AT HOME IN DENTON

DENTON, TEXAS, April 22—Douglas Butler 59 dean of the North Texas State Normal college and prominent Mason, died at his home here this morning after three months' illness. He was principal or superintendent of school at Palestine, Mexia and Hillsboro at various times. His widow and one daughter survive.

COAL EXPORTS FOR MARCH INCREASED IS BUREAU REPORT

WASHINGTON, April 22—Despite the anticipated miners strike which might have caused the holding of coal in the United States, coal exports during March increased as compared with February, according to reports issued today by the commerce department.

Bituminous exports aggregated 1,187,000 tons compared with 813,000 tons in February. Anthracite exports totalled 295,000 tons compared with 275,000 tons the month before.

Exports of refined petroleum during the month aggregated 231,000,000 gallons valued at $29,000,000 compared with 195,000,000 gallons worth $24,000,000 in March 1921. Exports of crude petroleum for March aggregated 34,000,000 gallons valued at $1,500,000 as against 91,000,000 gallons worth $2,000,000 in March a year ago.

Cotton exports increased slightly during March as compared with the same months last year, aggregating 461,000 bales, valued at $42,000,000 compared with 375,000 bales worth $27,000,000 a year ago.

GENOA CONTROVERSY INCIDENT TO SOVIET PROBLEM IS COOLED

START ACTUAL WORK ON THE PLAN FOR RECONSTRUCTION OF RUSSIA.

FOREIGN PROPERTY IS ONLY ISSUE INVOLVED

No Proposition Put Forward For Government Loans to That Country.

By Associated Press

GENOA, April 22—Actual work on a plan for the reconstruction of Russia was started today by experts representing the soviet government Great Britain France Italy Japan Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and Holland.

The heated politics surrounding the Russian problem has been cooled by M Chitcherin a note accepting in the main the allied formula stating the terms on which the great powers are willing to resume business relations with Russia.

Sir Edward Grigg private secretary to the British prime minister and others prominent in the conference have made it clear that no proposition has been put forward for government loans to Russia nor government guarantees of loans. The idea of the financial and economic experts is that when Russia reaches a position where she can give investors assurance that there will be legal basis for undertakings in Russia and that foreigners will have protection under proper courts abundant credits will be forthcoming for the development of Russian resources.

The single important point of difference between the Russians and the allied representatives is the unwillingness of the former to restore the freehold title for foreigners property which has been nationalized or requisitioned by Russia although they are willing to restore it to the former owners for their use.

In the case of factories this would doubtless be of a concession basis. Factories which have hitherto stood idle because the former owners refused to operate them unless assured that their title would be restored may be reopened if the soviet concessions are given a real basis by the Genoa negotiations.

The International Harvester company and many other large corporations having factories or mines in Russia have declined to consider taking concessions to run the property they have vigorously contended as theirs not owned by the soviet government.

An English spokesman said a meeting of the entire British delegation this morning decided to consider the incident that had arisen out of the Russo-German treaty as definitely closed. Since Germany had accepted the humiliation inflicted upon her by agreeing not to participate in discussions concerning Russia, the British spokesman said, it would be unsportsmanlike to insist on further concessions. He was not sure however how far the French really intended to go with their protests against the German reply.

SAYS REAL BASIS OF THE CONFERENCE IS POLITICAL

GENOA, April 22—Harry Wickham Steed, correspondent of the London Times wired the Times today that an important American financial authority had confided to him Thursday that he had been trying to discover the economic basis of the Genoa conference but had failed.

"He had begun to suspect" Mr Steed added "that the whole thing was a sort of farce. I reminded him that at Rapallo and in the city of Genoa representatives of the principal petroleum interests of the world were besieging the bolsheviki who thus were placed in the position of dispensers of favors to suppliants. But I could not disguise the fact that the real basis of this conference was political and must be sought rather in British home affairs than primarily in the condition of Europe'"

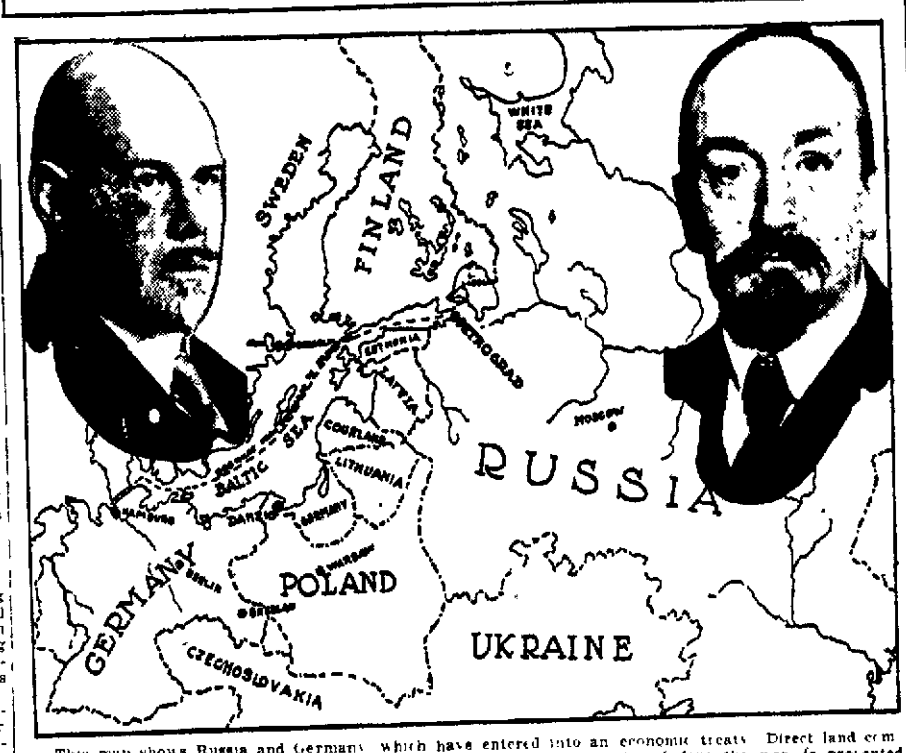
NEW ORLEANS, April 22—New Orleans decorated as probably never before was ready today to entertain the thousands of visitors who are coming here to attend the 25th triennial conclave of the Knight Templars beginning next Monday. Thirty-five thousand Templars and members of their families are expected.

THIS MAP TELLS RUSSO-GERMAN STORY



This map shows Russia and Germany which have entered into an economic treaty. Direct land communication between these countries, which was possible along the frontier before the war is prevented by the states set up by the treaty of Versailles. How long will these states be able to withstand the Russo-German interests? Especially Poland? How long will Russia and Germany be content to trade over the long water route which ice closes part of the year. At the left is Rathenau the German and at the right is Tchitcherin, the Russian who negotiated this treaty.

Gerard Says Russo-German Pact Builds a Gigantic War Machine

By JAMES W GERARD
(Former Ambassador to Germany)

NEW YORK, April 22—What I have for a year or more predicted in speeches and articles has happened.

Germany forced into a corner by the demand for sums greater than can be wrung from the German people, has chosen to make an alliance with Russia and to seek from the economic benefits to be derived from such an alliance the wherewithal to pay her pressing creditors.

Few people realize that for years the commercial language of Russia was German that the educated part of the population of the Baltic states is Germanic, and that from the men of German descent in these states were chosen many of the best generals and administrators of the old Russia.

And as surely as night follows day there will follow a military alliance between Germany and Russia.

France may well fear the day when the hordes of Russia drilled and disciplined by Germans led by Germans with all the vast resources of Russia administered by Germans will pour across Europe in that constant drive to the west which seems a brute instinct of all Europeans.

The new Poland will disappear once more partitioned between Germany and Russia.

No more important and startling event than this alliance has happened since that Armistice day, when the kaiser's empire fell.

TWO METHODS FOR ENDING COAL STRIKE ADVANCED IN DEBATE

NEW YORK, April 22—Two methods of ending the national coal strike were proffered last night in a debate at the hotel Astor in which leaders of both sides of the present industrial crisis participated.

Philip Murray vice president of the United Mine Workers of America announced that the coal workers were ready to return to the mines at once if congress would apply the bituminous coal commission's wage award of 1920 to present operations to remain in effect until a conference of miners and operators could be arranged.

Thomas H Watkins, president of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke company countered with a challenge to Mr Murray to "put the men to work on the 1917 scale and save yourselves and the whole country a lot of trouble."

Mr Murray charged his opponent with being the Alexander Howat among the coal operators of western Pennsylvania "asserting that Watkins had disrupted even his own organization by his inconsistent policies."

The coal operator retorted by charging that officials of the United Mine Workers of America were "deliberately inciting the workers to class hatred of capital and all it represents."

HAVE ACCUMULATION OF LOADED CARS ON SIDINGS

CHICAGO, April 22—With the coal strike closing its third week of idleness for more than 600,000 miners a survey of some of the fields shows an accumulation of loaded cars on sidings, with the market dull.

Central Illinois operators today reported 2,500 loaded cars awaiting orders and southern Illinois 3,638 more. The total in the Illinois fields is nearly 10,000.

Trade reports here show practically no demand for industrial or domestic coal except for use in steel plants from the West Virginia and Kentucky fields.

Woman Is Elected Judge on a Ticket That She Opposed

FREEPORT, ILL., April 22—Mrs Mildred Brandt elected police magistrate on a ticket which she had opposed during the recent campaign in the village of Winslow, has announced that she will not accept the position.

Mrs Brandt supported a women's ticket during the campaign in opposition to a men's ticket. The men's ticket won and so did Mrs Brandt, whose name was written in the ticket by the voters. She was elected by five votes over Mrs William Steere the women's candidate. Mrs Brandt now declines the position and declares she will not qualify. She offers no reason for her refusal. She is 42 years old and the mother of two children. Her husband offers no objection to her taking the position.

FEDERATED SHOP CRAFTS TO TAKE VOTE ON STRIKE

GRIEVANCES CENTER ABOUT CONTRACT SYSTEM BEING EMPLOYED.

CHARGE THE RAILROADS IGNORE LABOR BOARD

Result of Vote Will Be Known Within Sixty Days, Jewell Says

CHICAGO, April 22—Grievances centering about the contract system employed by some railroads in the handling of repair work has resulted in a vote for distribution of strike ballots to the 600,000 members of the railway employes department of the American federation of labor. This department comprises the six federated shop crafts and the Switchmen's Union of North America.

Authorization for the strike ballots was voted at the sixth biennial convention of the department which concluded its sessions today.

"If there is a strike and I feel sure our men will vote solidly for it it will be in protest of the action of the railroads in ignoring the labor board" said B M Jewell president of the railway employes department.

The labor board now has several complaints against the contract or farming system pending. It has been expected that a decision would be rendered soon after the conclusion of the present wage hearings.

"The carriers have arbitrarily reduced wages in defiance of the board" said Mr Jewell.

"A year ago we favored peace because of assurances given by the labor board that no further wage reductions would be considered for some time.

"But this time I am sure the issue will come to a showdown. So far as we are concerned it is a fight for existence.

Mr Jewell said that the question was simple—whether to strike or not to strike. He added that the result of the vote should be known within 60 days.

Mr Jewell charged that the roads are dodging the board's rulings by letting out shops to contractors.

"The carriers have been getting away with it thus far" said Mr Jewell. "We are going to find out whether they can continue to do so. The board it must be remembered has no real power to enforce its decisions. It must rely solely upon the influence of public opinion."

SPECIMEN OF WORM FOUND NOT THE DREAD BOLL WORM

VERNON, TEXAS, April 22—Specimens of a worm found this week in Wilbarger county cotton and forwarded to the federal horticultural board at Houston are not the dread boll worm according to advices wired here. MINERS ACCEPT REDUCTION IN WAGES PENDING ADJUSTMENT OF PAY IN DISTRICT TWENTY-ONE

FORT WORTH, April 22—Settlement of the coal strike at Bridgeport was effected Friday afternoon at a conference in Bridgeport between miners and operators and the 300 miners will all be back at work Sunday. Some of the day men started work again this morning when the whistle blew after being silent for three weeks.

The men agreed to take a cut in day wages of $1.50 per day and 25 cents a ton reduction for piece work. It was also accepted according to James Mooney special representative of President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America who returned to Fort Worth last night after representing the miners at the conference.

The new scale of wages is tentative and will be in effect until there is an agreement made between southwestern interstate coal operators association and district 21 of the mine workers union for Oklahoma and Arkansas where the strike is still on. Whatever wage scales are agreed to for this district will govern the Bridgeport mines Mooney said.

In a statement issued at Fort Worth today Mooney said he would be very glad to meet operators in the Thurber district and the Strawn fields and seek to work out an equitable wage scale with the interests. For more than a year the union miners have been locked out at the mines in these areas.

REPORT FROST FROM THE ATLANTIC COAST OVER A LARGE AREA

Spudders Make Clean Sweep of Gasser Series By Winning in Tenth

By PAUL W. LARKIN

Timely hitting by Jake Miller and Tex McDonald enabled the Spudders to make a clean sweep of the Gasser series Friday afternoon at Athletic park in a skirmish which lasted 10 innings—the first overtime battle of the season. After twirling invincible ball for eight chapters the Gassers fell on Steve Mokan with a vengeance, chasing him to the clubhouse in the ninth by slamming his offerings for three doubles and a pair of singles. The other man who faced Steve in this round was given a free ticket to first and the entire combination was responsible for four runs. Abe Bowman relieved him with one out and a man on second. Abe managed to retire the side but not until the man from second had scored the run which knotted the count at five all. The home crew passed up a wonderful opportunity to win out in the regulation time when Kitchens opened the Spudder's portion of this disastrous round with a double, but he was forced at third by Bowman, attempting to sacrifice, and a fast double play then killed their chances.

A wonderful stop by "Shorty" Adams was all that staved off defeat for the Salmites in the 10th. Holloban opened with a single but Adams speared Storey's drive in back of second base, stepped on the bag forcing Holloban, and threw to Beck to time to complete a double killing. Tex McDonald singled for the Spudders in this period with one away, stole second and after Beck had skied to Storey and counted on Miller's slashing single to left.

Red" Bird, the one Gasser hurler, who was thought might be able to stop the league leaders, was hit freely throughout and gave way to Burns in the seventh inning. Burns worked in masterly fashion for two chapters, but was removed to make way for a pinch hitter in the ninth and Williams finished. Billy Smith sent three hurlers to the hill in each of the four games here.

McDonald continued the dizzy pace he has set with the club this season by bagging three singles out of the five trips to the plate while both of Jake Miller's blows were of the timely variety, his first coming in the opening session with bases jammed in his second in the last chapter. The two hits accounted for three of the Spudders' counters.

The contest was replete with fielding thrills. The visitors turned in three double plays, which prevented them from sustaining a severe drubbing, while the Salmites contributed two double killings.

Bird's erratic throwing to the bases was in no small measure due to the defeat of the club, though he was not charged with the loss. He threw Summa's sacrifice away in the first, thereby putting his opponent in a good position to score while in the sixth he heaved Sorey's toss wide of the mark and permitted Adams to score.

Until the ninth inning only four hits were garnered off Steve Mokan, one of these was combined with a couple of passes in the seventh chapter and came near proving his undoing, but Lex Sorey saved him by engineering a double play with the bags full.

Rescher started the Spudders on their merry way in the first inning by hitting safely to center and he went to second on Summa's sacrifice. The latter was safe on Bird's poor throw. McDonald's infield hit filled the bags. Beck swung at three and his best was a couple of fouls, but Jake Miller came through with a clean wallop to right which scored Rescher and Summa. Adams then fanned and Sorey was thrown out by O'Shaughnessey.

Adams collected his daily extra base blow in the sixth when he tripled to rig t and he counted on Sorey's infield hit to Holloban.

"Shorty" started the ball rolling again in the sixth when he singled to center. Sorey had his hit to Bird beaten out, but the southpaw threw the sphere away and Adams counted while Lex romped to third. He score on Kitchens' smash to center.

Many fans left the park at the beginning of the ninth, but the real fund did not start until this chapter. Holloban started Mokan on the road to ruin by pasting a double to right. Storey and Kane followed with one base blows, Holloban scoring on Roy's knock. Storey tried to reach third on Kane's blow, but was nipped by Rescher's perfect peg. Cady drew a pass and Williams, hitting for Burns, crashed a double to left which scored Kane and Cady. Felix kept up the fusillade by walloping one for two to left center scoring Williams and Steve was then withdrawn. Hartford lofted to Storey, but Bowman couldn't stop Jackson who singled to left, scoring Felix. Elbel was thrown out by Storey for the final out.

Summa popped to Kane for a starter in the 10th, but McDonald poked a safety to right. Beck sent a high one to Storey and McDonald stole second. He counted a moment later on Miller's line drive to left center.

WICHITA HIGH WINS FROM VERNON, 5 TO 3

Bashara's Hitting Main Factor in Red and Black's Victory.

ELECTRA, TEXAS, April 22.—Wichita high, led by Bourland, knocked the Vernon high nine under for the count of 5 to 3 here yesterday. The Red and Black victory came as a sort of surprise as "Lefty" Baird, the Vernon ace, was looked upon as a certainty to win.

Bashara, Wichita's second baseman, had a great day with the stick and it was due to his hitting proclivities that the Wichitans emerged victorious. He countributed a brace of singles and a double, knocking in three runs and scoring another himself. The box score:

Yanks and Giants Maintain Terrific Pace Set a Week Ago.

NEW YORK, April 22.—New York's champion ball teams today were on the top of the heap in their respective circuits. Keeping up the sizzling early season pace they have been setting, the Giants yesterday won their sixth straight game, trampling Brooklyn again, although outslugged by their Flatbush rivals. The Yanks with Bob Shawkey's right arm working to perfection squeezed a 1-0 victory from Washington, an error letting in the lone tally.

Cleveland found itself in a tie for the lead with the Yankees when Ty Cobb's Detroit Tigers shook their losing jinx and slugged out a 15 to 7 victory. Both teams fattened their batting averages, Tris Speaker registering four singles.

The White Sox came from behind to tie St. Louis in the ninth and Smashed out six more runs in the 10th to clinch the contest.

The Cubs still are within a half game of the Giants, landing on Eppa Rixey yesterday for seven runs in the eighth and burying Cincinnati. The Boston Braves celebrated the opening of their home season by trimming the Phillies, Boeckel and Kopf playing stellar roles in the victory.

Two new leaders in the select swatting circle appear today, Harry Heilmann of the Tigers shoving to the fore in the American, while Tierney of Pittsburgh is on top in the National race.

The Egoist --- By Douglas Lyon

Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company

"I determined to go on with the program as arranged by you up to a certain point! That point has been reached"

I ALWAYS was a very quiet fellow, never self-assertive or vain. In the presence of the fair sex I am, as a rule, painfully shy. Such love-making as I have attempted has always been extremely awkward and invariably unsuccessful. How I came to be co-respondent in a divorce case, therefore, heaven only knows. Anyway, I did. And this, so far as I can understand, is how it happened.

I was in the smoking room of my club one day chatting to some other journalists when one of them who was facing the doorway gave an exclamation.

"Hullo!" he said, "here's George Charles. Wonder what he wants here?"

We had all heard of him, of course. He wrote brilliant novels full of inimitable wit and subtle sarcasm. His books were bizarre; they stripped society of its beautiful covering and showed it up for what it was really worth. No sentiment, no convention, no religion, no nobility was free from the biting cynicism of his pen. I had known him long ago at college. As a matter of fact, I had been editor of the college magazine to which he had occasionally contributed. He wrote extraordinary stuff even then. As a student, I remember, he was not popular, his tongue was too quick and his knowledge of human nature too deep for that. As a result he had very few friends. I liked him, however, and I think he liked me—as much as a man of his temperament could like anybody and anything! We used to have long talks together, and I found him even more amusing to talk to than to read—that is, when the mood seized him to be communicative.

We were graduated about the same time and drifted apart. Several years passed and then novels began to appear under his name. I read them with avidity. So did the public. Very soon, and seemingly without much effort, George Charles became famous. And now, for the first time since our college days, we met again. He came toward our little group, walking slowly, his eyes fixed on me. He was a tall man, somewhat thin, with an aquiline nose and high narrow forehead. His eyes were a hard blue, his mouth drooped at the corners so that an expression of profound discontent was forever on his face, marring its otherwise attractive ugliness.

"Good day, Lawrence," he said to me, ignoring the others. "I thought I'd find you here at this time."

I took his hand.

"Pleased to see you again," I said, somewhat coldly.

CONSIDERING that it was at least five years since we last spoke to each other, his casual greeting struck me as extraordinary. I felt piqued. However, Charles was always like that. He never wasted time on words, except in his books, on mere conventions.

"If you could spare me a few minutes," he went on, "I want to ask you a favor."

I swallowed my annoyance with an effort and, excusing myself to my companions, crossed to a corner of the room and sat down facing Charles.

"Look here," I said, "this is a bit thick, you know. I haven't seen you or spoken to you for more than five years, and yet you walk up to me as if we'd only parted yesterday. Then, to crown it all, you want to ask me a favor!"

Charles smiled one of his rare smiles, extraordinarily fascinating.

"I'm sorry, old man," he said softly, putting his hand on my arm. "I'm an inconsiderate boor, but I can't help it. You know me. You can forgive me. Honestly, I have been going to look you up scores of times and always put it off; you know the way one does! But I hope you won't let that prejudice you against granting my request!"

Well, I must admit it; in spite of myself I could not help liking the man at college and I could not help liking him now. I knew him for a pure egoist, selfish and unscrupulous to the last degree, and yet he attracted me somehow so that it was difficult to refuse him anything he asked. It transpired that he wanted me to write up an article on his early career at college for a big magazine. His publisher wanted it as soon as possible. He had come to me because he remembered my editing the school magazine. After some slight hesitation I agreed to write the story for him. It would be a good advertisement for me and—well, as I have said, he fascinated me.

"Well, look here," he said as he rose to go. "Come up to my place for dinner tomorrow night. We'll go over the old times together and I'll show you some of the things I used to contribute to the college mag., photos, souvenirs and the like, to refresh your memory. And, by the by, you'll meet my wife. You'll like her."

"Ah!" I said, surprised, for he was the last man on earth I should have thought who would have married. "I didn't know you had fallen!"

He smiled, cynically I thought; but then his smile was always cynical.

"Yes," he returned. "It happened a year ago."

I ARRIVED at Charles' flat about 7 the next evening. A maid ushered me into the study, an incredible apartment filled with cushions and armchairs and wonderful paintings. Books and periodicals lay scattered about the floor in absolute confusion—Charles would have no truck with bookcases, believing that half the joy of life had its origin in disorder.

The only objects in the room which hinted at the profession of its owner and the fact that actual work was ever done there was a straight-backed chair set in front of a small table upon which was a typewriter. Charles was seated in one of the armchairs, reading a newspaper. As I entered he threw the paper upon the floor and rose to meet me.

"Come in, old man," he said jovially. "Come right in and take a chair."

He shook me warmly by the hand. I sat down on a chair facing him and took a cigar from the case he offered me.

"There's a match box lying on the floor by your chair," he remarked, "and the same makes an excellent ash tray."

I took further stock of the room as I smoked.

"Pretty cozy here," I said, "but I must say the floor's in a bit of a mess."

"Yes, it is; but I prefer having my books and things handy. All I've got to do if I wish anything is to drop my arm over the side of the chair here and pick it up. No getting up or searching about!"

Several push-bell objects lying on the floor attracted by attention. I picked one up and found that it was attached to a wire leading to the wall of the room.

"What's this?" I inquired. Charles grinned.

"Press and see," he returned.

I did so, and immediately an orchestra struck up and I made out the opening strains of "The Storm" from "William Tell."

"Each of these bulbs is connected with a talking machine electrically operated," my host explained. "When I weary of dictating to my typist I press one of them at random and refresh my mind with a little music."

We talked of various things after that: of our early struggles in literature and so on. I found Charles little changed from his college days, a little harder, a little more self-confident, a little more of an egotist, but otherwise the same.

By the time the gong sounded for dinner I had almost forgotten that Charles was married and that I was to meet his wife. He rose before the last echoes had gone.

"Let us go," he said. "Hilda will be waiting."

She was standing before a bright fire in the dining room when we entered. She was young, not more than twenty-two, I should have said, with a slim, seductive figure and thick auburn hair. Her evening dress was of white and seemed gently to drape her figure. When she turned to greet us, I saw a sweet, rounded face with a little nose and a deliciously puckered forehead. Her eyes, as I afterward discovered, were the color of violets.

"My wife, Hilda—Mr. Lawrence," said Charles.

We shook hands and I murmured my pleasure.

"My husband often speaks of you," said Mrs. Charles, smiling. "You were great friends at college, were you not?"

I replied in the affirmative, evidently Charles had not told her that it was more than five years since we had met.

The dinner was excellent, the wines mellow and the hostess charming.

You know, as I said at first, I am not a man who shines in the company of women. I am shy. I am certainly not of the type of fellow who goes about looking for affairs of the heart. But I couldn't help thinking that Mrs. Charles caught my eyes oftener than there was any need for and that her own held more intimacy than was good for my peace of mind. I felt growing up between us as the dinner went on a sympathy which somehow thrilled me. I cannot very well explain it, but you must know what I mean—anywhere, riding in a bus, or walking along a street, you may get that feeling by the chance meeting of a woman's eyes.

I felt, however, that all was not well between Charles and his wife—the little things they said or left unsaid, the tone of their voices when they addressed each other, little discourtesies on his part, omissions from her and so on! Indeed, the dinner table to me seemed charged with the subtle atmosphere created always by strained conjugal relationships.

Almost immediately after dinner Mrs. Charles excused herself and retired. I fancied that her eyes sought mine a trifle wistfully as she said good-night * * *

Over our liqueurs and cigars Charles and I discussed the article I was to write. He showed me some of the sketches he had written years ago for the college mag. and I marveled again at their merit and how little they were appreciated then. Before parting he pressed me to come around another evening and let him know how I was getting on with the biography. I accepted his invitation gladly.

I must admit that Mrs. Charles interested me very much indeed * * *

SO I resumed my early friendship with Charles, and, although the article I had written for him had long since been completed and duly published, I continued to visit his house fairly frequently. His wife proved a great attraction to me and I could not help seeing that she liked me. Often when I called, Charles was out upon some business, and Hilda—I had begun to call her that—would entertain me until his return. She played the piano very prettily and sang in a voice as sweet as her nature. My knowledge of women is, of course, pathetically small, but I do think that she led me on somewhat. I usually felt perfectly at ease with her; she seemed to make me forget myself.

It may be that Charles resented finding me so often alone with his wife, but he never said anything, and never failed to ask me back again. And anyway, if he did not approve of my growing friendship with his wife, he had only to cease begging me to drop in and see him "any time, old man!"

I may mention that the feeling of marital disaffection grew as husband and wife became accustomed to my presence, and accordingly less careful in their demeanor toward each other. Often Charles would say things to his wife—nasty, cutting things—which made me long to hit him. And yet she smiled bravely through it all.

Of course Charles must have been a terrible man to live with continually. He was such an incurable egoist, an hour of his company put me all on edge; his wife must have suffered the tortures of the damned.

However, I must get on with my story and come to the events which led up to my appearance in the divorce court as a co-respondent * * *

I live in a flat down Kensington way. It is a nice, comfortable little flat, very suitable for a bachelor, and I have a nice, comfortable little housekeeper also very suitable for a bachelor. In the evening I almost invariably retire to my study after dinner and write till far into the night.

The evening I am to speak of was no exception to the rule. It must have been about 11 o'clock and I was seated at my desk endeavoring to write up an article for a Sunday paper, when the pussy-footsteps of my housekeeper approached the study door and a knock sounded. I cried "Come in" and she came. She was rather perturbed, I thought, and she spoke nervously.

"There's a lady at the door, sir," she announced, "and she says she wants to see you at once."

The fact that it was very unusual for ladies to come and see me at any time, and particularly in the evening, accounted, I had no doubt, to a certain extent for her perturbation, but there seemed to be something more in it than that.

"Well, Mrs. Stevens," I said, smiling, "if that is all show the lady in."

My housekeeper hesitated. I think, with a woman's intuition that she seemed to scent complications as a deer scents hunters—afar.

"But the lady, sir," she went on. "She does not appear to be what one might call herself! She's very excited and she's been crying. I only thought I'd warn you in case——"

"In case I considered it more discreet to be not at home," I prompted.

"Well, sir——"

"Have no fear, Mrs. Stevens," I said cheerily. "My conscience is clear. Show the lady in."

My housekeeper went out, forgetting in close the door in her confusion, and after a slight altercation without, Mrs. Charles walked in. She closed the door behind her and came toward me. I rose to my feet literally speechless with amazement.

"I'm so sorry to disturb you like this, Mr. Lawrence," she stammered, and I knew by the pitch of her voice that she was very near the breaking point, "but I had to come to you. My people——"

Thereupon she flopped into a chair and covering her head with her arm began to sob bitterly, like a thwarted child.

A nice thing this, you will say, for a man like me, absolutely unversed in the ways of women. I tried to take a firm hand.

"Come, come, Mrs. Charles!" I said as sternly as I could. "You mustn't give way like this. What has happened? What can I do for you?"

She looked up at me then and although her face was streaked with tears and her little nose red, I longed to take her in my arms and kiss her.

"It's my husband," she began brokenly. "He's a brute! I've stood his studied insults as long as I could, but tonight things have reached a climax. Tonight," she breathed hard, and her dear eyes were lit by a flame which could only have been hate, "he struck me. I struggled with him, but he held my wrists easily and only laughed at me. Afterward I pretended to forgive him and as soon as I could leave him, went to my room. It was then that I determined to come and see you. My people live in Scotland and I know very few people in London. Besides, you are an old friend of my husband. You can advise me what to do. Oh, Mr. Lawrence, please do try and help me!".

I thought she was going to dissolve in tears once more, but she bore up wonderfully.

I sat down facing her and thought the matter over. It was all terribly embarrassing, of course, not to mention irregular, and horribly compromising for me. She was in a condition bordering on hysteria just at present, but I knew that in the cold light of tomorrow morning things would look quite different and she would repent her actions.

I commenced to talk to her quietly, like a father. I told her she'd laugh at that little quarrel tomorrow; I told her to go back home at once and get to bed; I exhorted her not to mention that she had come to see me; I asked her for her own sake, and for the sake of every one concerned, to pull herself together and be reasonable.

In the end she came round and promised to do as I had indicated. She seemed very upset at the thought of having placed me in such an awkward position and swore to keep silent regarding her visit to my rooms.

It must have been 1 o'clock when she finally started for home in a taxi which I somehow managed to procure * * *

THE next I knew of the matter was a letter from Charles' solicitors, informing me that I was co-respondent in an action for divorce which he (Charles) was taking against his wife.

And there we are! I told you I was not the sort of man to be mixed up in a thing like that, but what could I do?

I tried to see Charles, but he was not to be seen. I tried to see his wife, but she, also, was not to be seen. I went to see my solicitors, they, at least, welcomed me with open arms.

The case came on. I do not wish to worry you, dear reader, with the harrowing details of the proceedings. Suffice to say that the servants of Charles all appeared and gave evidence against me. It seemed, in an entirely new light to me, that I was very often, and for long periods alone with Mrs. Charles in their house, and that I made a point of calling there at times when Charles was away on business. My housekeeper gave evidence as to how Mrs. Charles came to my flat at 11 o'clock one night and departed at 1 o'clock in a taxi. The driver of the taxi also gave evidence. And so it went on * * *

Charles got his divorce all right, and I was the villain of the piece * * *

And now I come to the anticlimax.

Mrs. Charles, now reduced to the rank of Miss Alton for her sins, drove in a taxi with me to my rooms, after the case.

I had been in love with her from the very beginning of our acquaintance, of course. She was such a brave little woman, and besides, her figure was so delightful, her age so inconsiderate and her eyes so adorable, that I could not help knowing that she was a jewel of priceless worth.

We had tea in my study, Mrs. Stevens acting the part of the chaperone and being wonderfully cheerful in spite of the ordeal of the witness box.

After tea my housekeeper withdrew and I proposed to Hilda. I said:

"I am a bit of an ass, but I love you, Hilda. From the first moment I saw you I loved you, although I never dared to mention the fact before. Now that you are free to marry again I offer you myself, my little income and my home. I long to marry you and to keep you henceforth from all harm and persecution. Will you be my wife?"

She replied:

"Dear Harold"—my name please—"you are the sort of man a woman is lucky beyond measure to meet; you are so kind, so unassuming, so manly. If you will allow me I shall love you with the greatest love in the world. I am proud to accept your offer."

At this point came a knock at the door and without waiting for permission the knocker entered. It was Charles.

I was extremely surprised to see him, of course, and so was Hilda. He gave me a curt good day and then turned upon the lady he had just divorced.

"Why on earth didn't you wait for me?" he demanded angrily. "I waited ages outside the law courts for you to appear and then was informed that you had driven off some time ago in a taxi with our friend here. What is the meaning of it? You know perfectly well that you arranged to come back home with me the minute the proceedings were over."

I stepped forward.

"Charles," I said firmly, "I cannot permit you to talk like this to Hilda. I would have you know that she has just consented to become my wife."

Charles turned on me, his face crimson.

"Your wife," he shouted furiously. "Don't you understand, you fool, that this divorce was all a put-up job? I merely wished to know at first hand how a divorce suit went, how a wronged husband felt, how an insane co-respondent looked, how every one behaved, so that I could depict it all exactly as it should be in the novel I am writing! Hilda is coming home with me now. The play is over." He turned to Hilda. "Come," he said somewhat dramatically. "Let us go."

I looked at my darling and was amazed to find her convulsed with laughter.

IN A little while she recovered. She stood up. She faced us.

"George," she said quietly, but with a world of feeling in her voice, "I've been fooling you all the time. You arranged this farce so that you would be able to get the data for your latest novel. At first I concurred with your scheme in spite of my natural repugnance at involving an innocent man in a divorce suit. When I saw Mr. Lawrence, however, I determined to go on with the program as arranged by you, up to a certain point! That point has been reached.

"All I wished for was my freedom. You are such a selfish cad, such an intolerable egoist, that I cannot imagine now how I have managed to live with you as long as I have. Mr. Lawrence opened my eyes to what a man could be. From the beginning I liked him very much, and then, later," she dropped her eyes, "I grew to love him."

"To love Lawrence," cried Charles. "Why he's a mere nonenity with no more brains than my little finger!"

Hilda looked up, her eyes flashing.

"He's a man," she replied, tensely, "which you are not. He is chivalrous, gentle and thoughtful. He has asked me to become his wife and I have consented gladly."

Charles gulped and then forced a laugh.

"Good lord," he said bitterly, "I thought I understood women, but—well, I give it up."

He turned abruptly and went out. On the threshold he tripped, over the door mat.

"Damn!" he cried.

And so it ended.

A Double Loss

MRS. JELLYBY endeared herself to Bridget, the stout and sentimental cook, by interested inquiries after Bridget's numerous relatives, and the answers she received often compensated her amply for the time she thus spent.

"Was your cousin Mary married the last of May, as she expected to be?" asked Mrs. Jellyby, on her return to town one autumn; and Bridget's face changed from cheerfulness to gloom in a moment.

"She was not, poor Mary!" she said, mournfully, "he was took off sudden with a fever. It was to her a double loss. There was the loss of the man, and there was the loss of the marriage."

At Last

A CLERGYMAN, called to other duties, preached his last sermon before the installation of his successor, and the local weekly, in announcing the order of services, gave it as follows:

"Sermon by the Reverend Doctor Blank; solo and quartet, 'Hushed at Length.'"

Two Kinds of a Wig

IN A Nebraska court an attorney was arguing with great earnestness and eloquence. In the midst of his argument he paused a moment.

"I observe that Your Honor shakes his head at that statement. I desire to reaffirm it, although Your Honor dissents."

"I have not intimated," replied the Judge, "how I should construe the evidence or what my decision will be in the case, and your remark is uncalled for."

"But Your Honor, you shook your head."

"That may be true," the Court said. "There was a fly on my ear, and I reserved the right to remove it in any manner I saw fit. Proceed with your argument."

A New Sensation

LITTLE Allen had visited one of the larger summer amusement parks for the first time, and with the courage possessed only by those girls whose playmates are boys older than themselves, she had not hesitated, when invited, to take a ride on one of the "thrillers" that abound in such places.

To her mother, on her return from the park, she confided the emotions she had experienced as she swung round the curves of the "figure eight" with her elder brothers.

"Mother," she said, "when I went round those awful turns so fast I felt just as if I had freckles on my stomach!"

Matrimonial Shrinkage

IT WAS a well-known writer of verse, to whom a lady said:

"I have just seen your wife for the first time since your marriage; but I had supposed she was a taller woman. She seems shorter than when I saw her last."

"Certainly," said the writer, solemnly. "She has married and settled down."

Past Help

THERE entered a jeweler's shop an old man with an ancient clock under his arm. This he laid on the counter with the request, "I wish you'd see what's the matter with this."

The jeweler removed the dial, screwed his eyeglass into place, and inspected the works of the old timepiece.

"Nothing is the matter with it—now; its sufferings are over."

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the old man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This is not professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."

SATURDAY APRIL 22, 1922

DANCING, HARD WORK.

Can you walk 25 miles without getting fagged out? Probably not. Yet you cover that much distance in an ordinary evening of dancing.

A German scientist recently figured it out.

Madalyn Lee, young Boston girl, checked the figure. She wore a pedometer, danced five hours, found she had traveled 25 miles. Not only that, she 'finished fresh.'

A Marathon runner doing 25 miles at about the same speed as a modern fast dance, staggers down the home stretch and falls into his trainers' arms.

How do you explain it?

On a 25 mile Marathon the runner moves steadily without stopping.

The 25 mile dancer steps the light fantastic for a few minutes, then pauses to recuperate. It's like the intermission between rounds of a prizefight.

The human body is a machine. It runs steadily just so long, then gets overheated. A pause to halt combustion of energy by the thyroid gland also cools the brain, steadies the nerves and recharges the batteries.

Rested, if only for a few minutes, the body is ready to go ahead again at top speed.

That's why, returning from a short vacation sensibly spent in rest, we find our energy doubled as we settle down again to work.

Brain workers, in particular, can increase their productive capacity by relaxing into absolute rest five minutes an hour. Some shrewd factory managers give their employes similar periods of rest as a matter of increasing efficiency.

Like all things, this 25 mile proposition has a psychic or mental science side.

Getting it down to psychological fundamentals, it's like a Boy Scout who growls at chopping kindling at home but whistles happily and gladly chops wood for hours in camp.

Whether a task is hard or easy, all depends on the mental attitude.

To enjoy life and make all tasks pleasant, select the line of work you want most. That is your real find. To get into it, fight and overcome all obstacles — mountains, walls and towers."

If you have people working for you, you can "put their hearts in their work" by making the work pleasant and introducing into it the element of competition—sport, play.

Behind this is the explanation of why so many potentially successful boys have their life careers ruined by parents shoving them away from what they want to be into occupations that they find stupid or only mildly interesting.

CUPID SENDS TWO OF KATY OFFICES TO LOVER'S LEAP

The usual and unvaried week end trips to distant points of two employes of the Wichita Falls and Northwestern railroad company offices have drawn to a close. Two employes left Friday night to their accustomed destination where before the beginning of a new week will have approached the altar and will have fallen upon themselves a life long vow and promise.

L. O. Ward, timekeeper in the superintendent's office, departed for Denison where on Sunday the wedding ceremony will be performed. He will bring his bride to Wichita Falls where they will be at home at 1409 Monroe street. Mr. Ward has the house in readiness for occupancy. The part of the second part of this contract is Miss Nell E. Ferguson.

W. A. Springall, traveling freight and passenger agent, accompanied by H. G. Smith, general freight and passenger agent, left for Cleburne where he will also take a similar step. It is not known but it is believed Mr. Springall will also return to this city to make his home.

BRIGHT LIGHTS, JOY RIDES AND MOVIES MAKE A HIT WITH CHINA'S POPULATION

WASHINGTON April 22—Bright lights, joy rides and the movies have made a hit in China, Trade Commissioner Lynn W. Meekins reported from Shanghai today. 'The joy ride' he said, 'made an immediate hit in China and motor cars are being multiplied. Chinese are so enthusiastic over motion pictures that they have begun producing films themselves.'

FEW SUBJECT TESTS PLAN FOR COLLEGES

Suggested As Means of Overcoming Crowded Conditions In Schools.

CHICAGO April 22—Entrance examinations in a few test subjects may some day be required for prospective college students, suggested Dean Eugene Davenport of the University of Illinois college of agriculture in an address here today before the Cornell alumni association. Dean Davenport discussed the question 'Shall Colleges Limit Registration?'

'The sudden rise of college enrollment following the war, often crowding to capacity, gave rise to a kind of panicky consideration of the question of limiting attendance,' said Dean Davenport.

It is one question for an endowed institution, a very different question for one that is supported by taxation. The latter can hardly consider the question of limitation, either by arbitrary methods or by raising the standards of admission.

The difficulties of limitation for any institution are well nigh prohibitive. The limitation may be made geographical but this leads to provincialism. Excessive fees means that the institution exists only for the wealthy. If entrance conditions are raised much above the general level of the secondary schools, then the institution exists for the favored few. Any limitation based upon high entrance requirements will rule out the late maturing class in which is found much of the best material.

'It is feasible to reduce numbers by requiring strict attention to business after entrance in that way eliminating the indifferent junior and the senior who barely skins through.

We shall come some day to entrance examinations in a few test subjects if for no other reason than to classify the entrants and to show the students what college work is like and what colleges expect.'

First Christian Church.

Tenth and Travis streets. Last Sunday—Easter Sunday—was a great day in all the services at the First Christian. Bible school and church. More than 800 present and many coming in after the official count was made. Everyone is invited to come to Bible school Sunday morning and enjoy the study of God's word from the Bible only. Greater interest is being manifested in the study of the Bible and the Bible only in all departments of the Bible school. Come at 9:30 sharp for the Bible study then stay for the morning worship hour. Rev. J. Lem Keevil will preach on "The Mountains of God—Elijah on Mount Carmel." Rev. Keevil is a most convincing teacher and you will not only his messages from the word of God but you will be made glad by worshiping in the house of the Lord.

At the night services Rev. Keevil will speak on the subject 'A Strange Rejection' or 'An Anxious Seeker Sought Yet Lost.' All visitors to the city are welcome. Every church member invited and urged to be present at all services. Come and bring your friends.

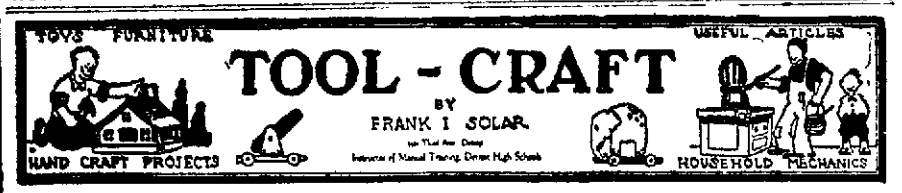
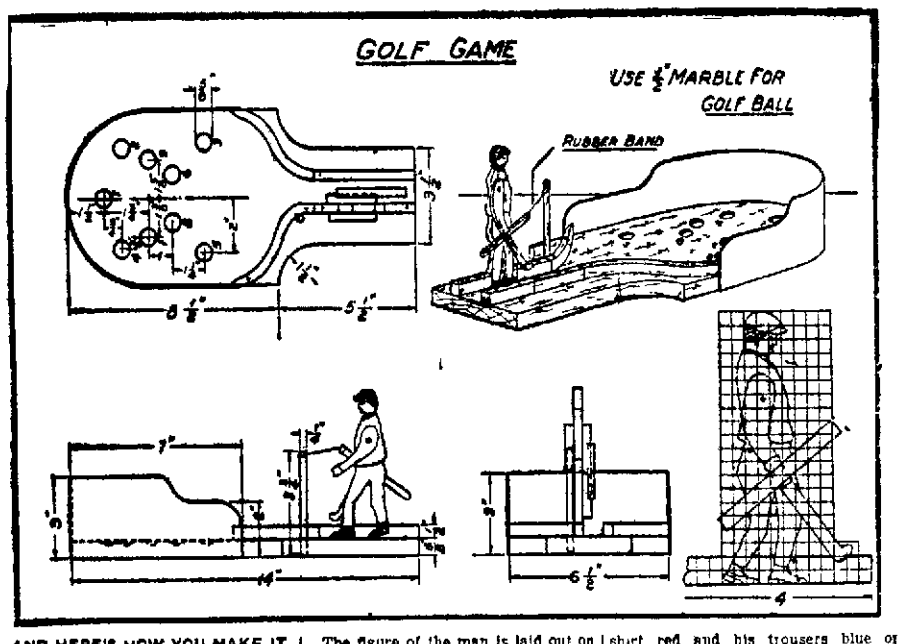
At Yactory church the Rev. Mr. Estes will preach at 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., closing the revival services. An offering will be asked at the evening service for the visiting minister and his wife. At north side the pastor will preach at 11:00 a. m. immediately after the Sunday school at 10:00 a. m. There will be preaching at night also.—W. A. BUTTS, Pastor.

OUT OUR WAY

BY WILLIAMS





AND HERE'S HOW YOU MAKE IT

The Golf Game is a fascinating amusement and it is especially so when you have made the toy yourself and with your own tools.

The wooden parts of the toy should be of some soft material. A plane a hand saw and coping saw are the tools needed for the woodworking. A pair of tin snips will be needed to cut out the back stop for it is of tin.

The diagram in the upper left hand corner of the picture shows clearly how the base is cut out. Nine golf holes are made in it in the positions shown. Bore them with a countersink and make them deep enough to catch and hold the marble ball. The narrow wooden guards that are fastened to the base should be made of small pieces of pliable stock, bent to shape and tacked securely in place.

The figure of the man is laid out on a piece of wood one surface of which has been divided into quarter inch squares with a pencil. Lay out the figure so that it covers the same number of squares on the wood as it does in the diagram. The man and the base he stands upon are sawed in one piece. Fasten the base to the bottom of the toy with screws.

The arms of the man must be sawed separately and fastened to the body with roundhead screws. The arm that holds the golf stick and the golf stick itself should be sawed in one piece. The cross bar to which the rubber band is fastened is joined with a half-lap joint to the golf-stick arm.

Before assembling the toy paint the parts. The base should be painted green, the holes yellow and the tin back-stop bright red. The man's cap and shoes should be made black, his shirt red and his trousers blue or brown.

When the parts have been painted assemble them. To operate the toy take hold of the stick fastened to the golf stick arm. Pull it back. This stretches the rubber band. Place a marble in a shallow impression that should be made in the little trench at the man's feet. Let go of the stick. The golf stick flies forward, strikes the marble and drives it out on the green. It will roll back and if you are lucky into one of the holes.

Each person makes three shots at a turn. The holes in the green are numbered and the numbers of the holes the ball drops into are added together. The first player to reach a total of fifty or above it wins the game.

TO TRY MINGO "ARMY" LEADERS

By NEA Service

CHARLES TOWN, W. VA., April 20—In the same court house where John Brown, the abolitionist, more than 50 years ago was sentenced to death for treason, several hundred miners will go to trial starting April 24 on charges ranging from minor misdemeanors to murder and treason.

These defendants are alleged to be members of the miners' army which marched on Mingo and Logan counties last August and engaged in pitched battles with state troops.

Heading the long list are C. F. Keeney, president of district 17 of the United Mine Workers of America, Fred Mooney, A. C. Porter, William Blizzard, Isaac Scott, Lawrence Dwyer and Frank V. Snyder, editor of a labor paper.

Against Conditions

The miners' 'insurrection' was the outgrowth of a protest meeting against alleged conditions in the mine fields. Mob psychology got into action and miners began assembling at Marmet, W. Va. Leaders announced they would move on the Logan county coal fields carrying the banner of unionism.

This move was abandoned when a war department official held a conference with Frank Keeney, official of the United Mine Workers of America, and Keeney ordered the men to disband.

Mob Reorganized

Later, however, miners heard that Captain J. R. Brockus of the state constabulary had made a raid and disarmed some miners at Sharples, and remobilization occurred. The march shortly began and Logan county mobilized forces of deputy sheriffs to give battle.

Logan defenders repelled the invaders time and again. Army trucks and airplanes were put to use and actual warfare lasted for a time.

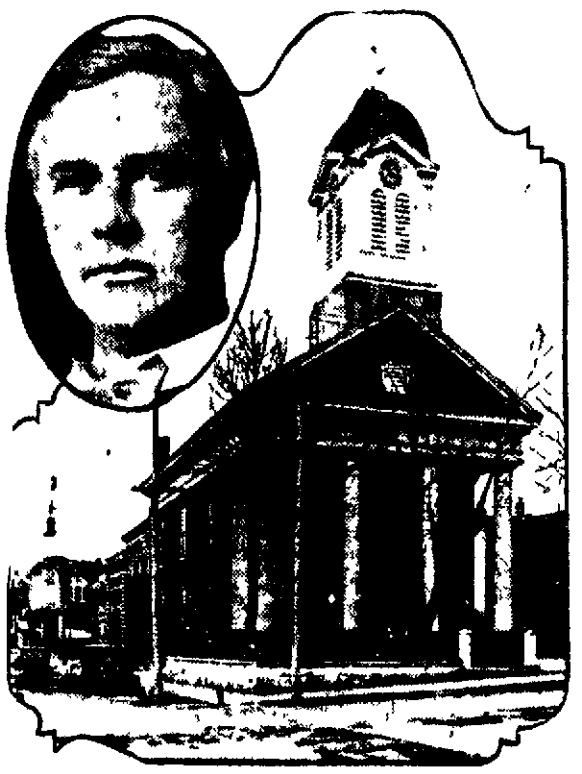
Then federal troops were dispatched and the miners' army was hemmed in. It disbanded.

The actual casualties were never known. Logan lost three or four men and the miners were believed to have sacrificed many more.

Sheriff John Chafin was slain at Blair Mountain and many clashes of conspiracy to commit murder are based on this.

Grand juries immediately started an investigation and hundreds of indictments were returned. Arraigned in Logan county all defendants were granted a change of venus to Jefferson county, where their trial April 24 will start in the historic court house.

Judge John Mitchell Woods of Martinsburg, W. Va., will preside at the trials. He is serving his second eight year term as jurist on the twenty third West Virginia circuit. He sits in three counties, Morgan, Berkeley and Jefferson.



The court house at Charles Town, W. V., where several hundred miners go to trial on April 24, and Judge John Mitchell Woods, who will preside.

MAN FIFTY YEARS OLD CHARGED WITH ATTEMPT TO ATTACK SMALL GIRL

PINE BLUFF, ARK., April 22—Chi Collins, 50 years old, has been taken to the penitentiary at Little Rock for safe keeping after an eight year old girl, according to county authorities, identified him as a man she alleged had attempted to attack her yesterday.

HOUGHTON PRESENTS HIS CREDENTIALS AT BERLIN

By Associated Press

BERLIN, April [illegible]—Alvan B. Houghton, the new American ambassador to Germany, presented his credentials today to President Ebert, who received the ambassador at the presidential palace. Daniel C. Haimhausen, first secretary for the foreign office, was in the ambassadorial party. Both bowed to the chief.

Intoxication Not A Murder Defense Opinion of Judge

CHICAGO April 22—The recommendation of a coroner's jury that a confessed slayer be released on the ground that he was intoxicated and therefore not criminally responsible was being investigated today, Coroner Hoffman announced. The verdict of the jury returned yesterday recommended release of Fritz Meinhausen who had signed affidavits acknowledging the slaying of Mrs. Anna Peters, a dress maker.

She was shot and killed on April 4 while fighting Meinhausen's wife.

'The law makes no allowance for intoxication in killing,' said Coroner Hoffman.

Credits Escape to Value of Sausage As Shock Absorber

LOS ANGELES April 22—Sausage as a shock absorber saved the life of I. R. Craddock, truck driver here yesterday, according to his opinion expressed in his report to police. Craddock was driving a truck filled with meat products when an incomplete shipment of sausage thrown aboard slipped in front of the truck. He was uninjured but badly tangled in sausage.

THREE TICKETS ARE PUT IN NOMINATION BY AUTO DEALERS

Three tickets were put in the field Friday night at the meeting of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers association for the coming club election. Frank Quiesser, C. C. Randle and Dan Rubsam are the three presidential nominees and an interesting contest is expected.

About 80 members and guests attended the semi-monthly meeting at the Kemp, the session being more or less an open one. The principal event on the program was a talk by Raymond Myers on 'Service from the Standpoint of the Average Automobile Owner.'

Al Booth, president of the association, reported on the silent cop situation saying that Police Commissioner Pitts had told him that since the installation of the traffic signals accidents had decreased 50 per cent.

Music by the Patrician quintette was a pleasing feature of the program.

NEFF LEAVES AUSTIN ON SPEAKING CAMPAIGN

AUSTIN, April 22.—Governor Neff leaves tonight for Wichita Falls where he will tomorrow afternoon begin his speaking campaign of Texas. His Perils and Possibilities. He will be gone about 10 days and will continue his speaking engagements to the panhandle and northwest Texas. Later he will speak in other parts of the state.

STORY HANDWRITING TELLS

Expert Reads Secrets Between the Lines

By ALBERT J. SMITH

The style of handwriting affected by President Warren G. Harding is the typical journalistic hand.

It denotes the cool deliberate scrawl of the trained executive with well seasoned powers of deduction. It is a strong hand. This conclusion is obtained from the semi angularity of the script, the consistent joining of the letters without a break and the decreasing or wedge shape of the writing.

Harding has a strong intellect. The twists of deep concentration are well developed and the faculty of diplomacy is well marked.

We discover these qualifications in the tendency to small writing, the continuity of the pen traces and the wedge shaped words Warren and Harding.

The president has more or less of an impenetrable nature. It is difficult to get behind his motives. He is the deep thinker, the student of facts. He cannot be hurried, he must be shown.

To the casual observer Harding would convey the impression that he is slow to move and lacking in aggressiveness. This is due to his impenetrability for he has the faculty of arriving at his conclusions without attracting undue attention. There is nothing 'Barnumistic' in his methods, there is no ostentation or bombast.

We know that Harding has a keen sense of his dignity. This is determined by the sharp tops of his writing which he unconsciously tries to incorporate into his usually rounded m's and n's.

Observe the unpretentious underscore of Hardings signature, the tail like appendage to the g in Harding gracefully sweeping into a slight curve without the customary dash of the artist. This denotes moral courage and refinement with prudence and that sense of reputation and character upheld at all costs.

NO PIECE WORK BASIS TO BE IN EFFECT HERE

Superintendent F. W. Grace of the Wichita Falls and Northwestern of this city stated Saturday morning that there will be no piece work or contract basis plan put into effect in the railroad shops in this city. Following the announcement made through the press Friday of the action taken at Sedalia and Denison Mr. Grace stated that he had had no official communication on this subject in any particular. The shops locally are working full time.

The WHITE DESERT

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Author of "The Cross Cut"

Fate had given Barry Houston a harsh deal. Falsely accused of murder, a sacrifice to the political ambitions of a district attorney, snubbed by his friends, distrusted by his father and then—He came to the White Desert to work out his salvation. In the snow and ice of the Continental Divide, on the backbone of the North American continent in Colorado, he began a lone battle against the unknown forces which were wrecking his lumber business.

Allied against him were the frost-warped men of the timber lands and "the feminine Judas"—the woman he had promised to marry. The mounting climaxes of the battle against harsh men and even crueler winter are wedded into a brilliant and gripping work of fiction. The charming and eccentric Ba'tiste Renaud and Medaine Robinette, the girl of the mountains, are characters which will remain in your memory.

Diver Victorious In Battle With a Giant Devil Fish

TACOMA, WASH., April 22.—Battling for his life 60 feet beneath the surface of Puget sound, Walter McCrea, diver known in marine circles from Alaska to California, came out victor here yesterday over a giant devil fish.

The monster wound its tentacles so tightly about McCrea that the diver was unable to reach the knife he carries for protection. When one tentacle tightened it cut off the air supply. McCrea through the submarine telephone called for a short steel working bar. With this weapon the diver was able to pierce the body of the devil fish and at last the man, almost master, still struggling, especially was drawn to the surface. The fight took place in the Puget sound, in the water.

BELFAST HAS RETURNED TO COMPARATIVE QUIET

(By Associated Press.)
BELFAST, April 22.—Belfast returned to comparative quiet today after the series of serious disorders which marked the Easter holidays. The only incident reported early in the day was the wounding of a special constable, who was struck in the leg by a bullet fired from a window on Falls street.

James Green, who was shot during the rioting on the Albert Bridge on Friday, died last Thursday.

THE MARKETS

COTTON—GRAIN—FINANCIAL—LIVESTOCK—PRODUCE

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The New York cotton exchange was closed today while a force of workmen moved its records and equipment to temporary quarters at 30 Wall street.

The present building at 60 Beaver street will be torn down and replaced by a 22 story building, the 17th floor of which will be devoted to cotton trading. A farewell address by E. P. Hubbard, one of the oldest members of the exchange, and the singing of Auld Lang Syne featured the closing of the old building at the last trading session today.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, April 22.—Market for futures was irregular in general and unsettled overall. In construing the news from the conference, cause enough for buying in the first half of the session, but the last half of the session was marked by weakness, long liquidation and new selling, with the bell caused little or no selling.

Large exports for the day, total 25,000 bales, including a fair export demand from Belgium, Italy and Spain, the domestic spinners were buying, contracts here kept the market steady, the close and prices 10 to 15 points up at their best. May traded up to 16.90 in October, the close was at net gains of 10 to 1 point. May closing 16.60 and October at 17.06. Cotton in fair demand, sales for export and Savannah at 16.70. Cotton closed steady, at a net advance of 10 to 15 points.

	High	Low	Close

July	17.[illegible]	16.[illegible]	17.18
October	17.[illegible]	16.[illegible]	17.06
December	17.[illegible]	16.[illegible]	17.04
January	17.[illegible]	16.[illegible]	17.00

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, April 22.—Spot cotton quiet, unchanged; sales on the spot 1,[illegible] bales; receipts 481; low middling 16.[illegible]; strict low middling 17.[illegible]; good middling 17.[illegible]

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO, April 22.—Liverpool cables were instrumental in the trading here today and as a result there was little activity at the start of the wheat market. The opening, which ranged from 1 cent lower to 1 cent higher, with May $1.4[illegible] to $1.4[illegible] and July $1.[illegible] to $1.4[illegible], hung around these figures for a time then fell off.

The Kansas crop report which, later was instrumental in lending some buying and the market underwent practically no change. It was said to be influenced by price advances sharply, but to close with little net change in the value. May went to 1.45½ again at the opening, figure on the crop of 140%. The close was strong, with prices ranging 1 to 2½c net higher with May 1.47⅞ to 1.47¾ and July 1.29½ to 1.29¾.

Trading in corn and oats was comparatively light and moved in sympathy with wheat. After corn had started up changed to ½c lower and started up changed to ½c lower with July 71½ to ¾, a rally set in and in fact gains followed. Oats started unchanged to ½c off, July being 40½, then advanced slightly. Provisions were firmer with the advance in hogs.

Later the corn market showed fair activity and prices averaged higher in sympathy with wheat. At the finish prices ranged ½ to 1c higher with July 68½ to 68⅞.

Chicago Produce.

CHICAGO, April 22.—Butter, higher; creamery extras 38. Eggs, lower; receipts 42,278 cases; firsts 1[illegible]. Poultry, alive, lower; fowls 1[illegible]; roosters 17.

Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Rio coffee futures, irregular; May 10.15; December 9.[illegible]

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Raw sugar firm and unchanged; Centrifugal 3.98. Refined unchanged, fine granulated 5.35 to 5.40.

Sugar futures, nominal. Closing bids: May 4.70; July 4.90; September 5.20. Sugar futures closed steady, at approximate sales 12,250 tons. May 4.30; July 4.54; September 4.94; December 4.90.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, April 22.—Today's broad dealings in the stock market almost entirely at higher levels centered in equipments, independent steels, motors, oils and utilities. High grade rails were in immediate demand but junior transportations were active and strong. American and Baldwin Locomotives, pressed steels, Chesapeake and Ohio, Reflogle and Lackawanna steels rose 1 to 2 points. Pierce Arrow preferred, Mack Truck common and first preferred and many of the domestic oils were 1 to 3 points higher. Local tractions and gas issues were irregular, while coppers, motors, rails and specialties were mixed with such specialties as Coca Cola and Postum Cereal. The closing was strong. Sales approximated 750,000 shares.

CANDIDATES HOLD JOINT DISCUSSION AT ARCHER CITY

Staff Special to The Times

ARCHER CITY, TEXAS April 22 — Before an assemblage of 3 0 people Friday night, Attorney S A L Morgan and Guinn Williams aspirants for the unexpired term of Hon Lucian Parrish as representatives from the Thirteenth congressional district, held a joint discussion in the county courthouse here and placed before the voters of this county their respective principles and platforms

Each of the speakers has practically the same views on many public issues of the day They both discussed the tariff question the immigration problems state rights soldiers bonus federal reserve bank system and reduction of taxes On the tariff soldiers' bonus and tax reduction the two candidates expressed somewhat different views and it was these three issues that they centered their exceptions

Mr Williams who opened and closed the joint discussion opened the question as to whether a business man or lawyer could better represent the people in congress He stated that he was making the race as a business man and expressed the opinion that the law-making bodies of the state and country needed more business men Mr Morgan in reply stated that he was not a criminal lawyer and that for many years he had conferred with and advised business men as an attorney and had studied the various problems of business and knew the needs of the Thirteenth congressional district from a business standpoint of view as well as his opponent

Fully 80 men and women from Wichita Falls attended the joint discussion

BOWIE TEST WELL SPUDDED IN WITH SPECIAL PROGRAM

BOWIE TEXAS April 22 — On Thursday according to schedule the Bowie Chief Oil company spudded in their Boedocker No 1 well with an impressive ceremony before a crowd of spectators numbering about 3 000 people from different parts of north Texas and Oklahoma Three beeves were barbecued but as the crowd was much greater than expected all the people did not get as much barbecue as they wanted

P E Donald president of the chamber of commerce was master of ceremonies, and introduced C W Johnson the president of the oil company who made an interesting speech as to what the company proposes to do Just before Miss Very Clark daughter of W J Clark christened the well with a bottle of wine (grape juice) a picture of the spectators was taken by I C Mullen a photographer of Wichita Falls from the top of the water tank

In addition to the ceremonies connected with the spudding in of the well a wild west rodeo was put on by home talent for the amusement of the crowd

"BABE RUTH OF THE BIBLE" TO BE SUBJECT OF DR. KNICKERBOCKER

"The Bible is the mirror of life" said Rev H D Knickerbocker pastor of the First Methodist church south corner Tenth and Lamar For instance in preparing my sermon on The Baseball Game of Life which I am going to preach Sunday night in my annual big baseball service I find there is a counterpart to Babe Ruth in the Old Testament There are lots of other splendid analogies and exceedingly interesting points Brother Walter Salm and Secretary Gray have already accepted my invitation on behalf of the Spudders to be present in a body We have invited also the visiting team to occupy seats of honor at this service Being a baseball fan myself and being a student of psychology and philosophy and symbolism of the game I have found it a prolific source of great analogies and illustrations for a number of years I have made it my custom for a long time to preach a sermon immediately after the opening of the season These services have always been very popular and the audiences have overflowed the auditorium In preaching the sermon on The Baseball Game of Life I will use not only the historical happenings in the game and great general analogies but I have attended a special game here at home with my notebook in my hand and made the best part of my sermon out of local plays and players I will forfeit a dollar to any fan who finds a dull minute during the playing of the game which will be 40 minutes long

There will be a special musical program including a special baseball song composed by myself and sung by I C Huckabee

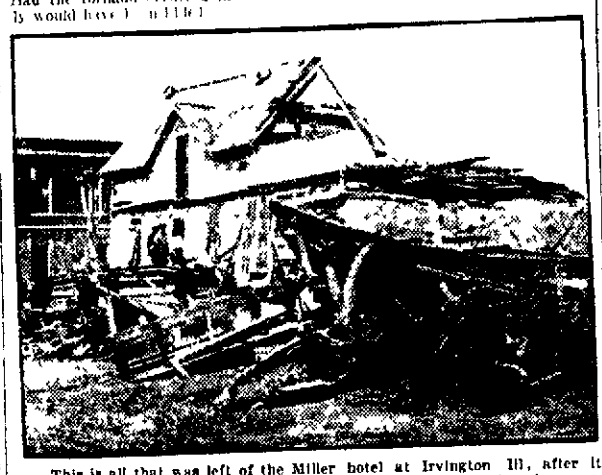
At 9 30 a m we are going to have 1300 in Sunday school We are having the largest most enthusiastic time we ever did We beat Amarillo and El Paso last Sunday but only by a very few and we have got to run like a scared rabbit to keep ahead of them

At the 11 00 o clock hour I am going to preach a short sermon on The Greatest Methodist in the World We expect to receive about 50 more members at this service The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered to the largest number that ever partook of it in this church

During this wonderful spring weather our oft-repeated admonition Come early if you expect to get a back seat is more necessary than ever

IN WAKE OF ILLINOIS TORNADO

The Illinois tornado tore the Irvington school from its foundations and literally scattered it all over town Not even a whole desk could be found Had the tornado occurred in the future many of the students undoubtedly would have been killed



This is all that was left of the Miller hotel at Irvington Ill, after it was struck by the tornado that swept through the town a few days ago Eighteen persons were in the hotel at the time Only six escaped injury No one was killed

SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn. — "Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past." — Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a trial.
